

Aqueduct Water.

Already are several persons tapping the supply pipe recently laid along Pennsylvania avenue, and attaching service pipes to conduct the water to their houses as soon as all the connections are completed.

Thompson & Bro. are doing the work.

We, however, suggest to those who have not yet taken steps to introduce water to their dwellings, that, as serious illness frequently arises and deaths ensue from the use of leaden conduit pipes, they can avoid all danger to themselves and families by the use of iron pipes instead.

We notice that one of the hotels are already laying leaden pipe—a thing which should be avoided in view of the vast number of people annually partaking of the water. It is in fact our opinion that a law should be enacted without delay to prevent the use of leaden water pipes under any circumstances, as a sanitary protection to our citizens.
