WHAT WE DRINK.—Our morning cotemporary who manifests such a horror of river water, as a beverage, taken from above the city, may learn, if he will, that thousands are daily drinking river water, taken from the stream* in the city. Most of the hotels, and many boarding houses, and private families use this water filtered, and have had scarcely any other for a long time. We cannot learn that those residing in the central part of the city, who use river water complain of its quality, and there is as little mortality there as elsewhere.
